Biking in Copenhagen

Copenhagen, Denmark | May 13-25, 2020

Students will travel to the most bike-friendly city in the world and become immersed in Copenhagen's bicycle culture. They will observe bicycle infrastructure, including urban design features and multi-modal transportation solutions. Additionally, they will learn from programs and policies that support biking and learn about the role of biking in sustainable, livable communities. This course will be taught from a multi-disciplinary perspective to address the complex issues associated with biking. Activities and assignments will be focused on applying information and content to other countries and communities.

Led by Melissa Bopp, Associate Professor of Kinesiology, and Mallika Bose, Associate Professor of Landscape Architecture
